GRAFTON HIGH

FOREWORD

There are so many things that make up a school. There are buildings, books, teachers, and most of all there are students. The people who work together within the buildings are in reality the school. Now you walk through the deserted corridors of the place that you once called school, corridors that once were alive and noisy with people. When you walk into the gym, your footsteps echo off the bleachers where once hundreds of people sat—or stood—screaming for that last shot, the one that would win the game. You enter the auditorium that is black as night, and as your eyes accustom themselves to the dark, your imagination pictures the stage alive with the characters of Annie or Peg. As you wander around this place that you once called your school, you realize that now it isn't yours, that your memories of the years you spent inside these buildings are the only part that you really own. Here and there lie mementos of those days; a book cover, a torn decoration from a dance, the remnants of the fight posters that once adorned the gym and cafeteria. But the part of Grafton that will make it yours is the remembering of the dances, games, studies, and activities. The following pages are a partial effort to help you remember these past three years.

Dedication

The ability to serve one's school is a human characteristic worthy of recognition. A person who serves not only his school but also the student body, a person who serves not only with ability but with williness, such a person becomes even more worthy of recognition. The class of 1968 has dedicated its yearbook to such a person. He is a man of many talents, and he holds several positions in Grafton High School executing each one with excellence. He is a man who unselfishly thinks first of his students and of Grafton High School. We, the class of 1968, dedicate our COMPASS to Mr. Raymond LeMay.

Her Friends

At this time, I would like to thank everyone who has helped in the creation of the 1968 COMPASS. Special thanks go to Dick Lynch, our business manager, to Sue Knapik, the assistant editor, without whom this never could have been finished, and most of all, to our advisor, Mr. Dussault, without whom it never could have been started in the first place.

Joan Goulet,
Editor
